

When Fires Happen

By mskristenpreschoolonline.com

Sometimes fires happen.

Sometimes they happen in forests and sometimes they happen in towns and cities.

When a fire happens, firefighters are called to put out the fires.

Firefighters hurry to put out the fires with water from their trucks.

Sometimes, they drop water or powders with airplanes or helicopters to put the fires out.

When fires happen, I may need to leave my house in order to stay safe while the firefighters put the fires out.

I may feel scared or anxious when fires happen near me.

It's okay to feel scared, I can let the adults in my life know how I feel. I can ask for a hug or draw a picture about how I'm feeling.

I could also take some deep breaths, listen to music, or read a book to help me stay calm.

I can remember that fire fighters are working night and day to protect me, my family, and our community.

When fires happen, it can feel scary. But I can remember that fires don't last forever. And the adults in my life, including the police and firefighters are going to protect me.

Our community will work together, and everything is going to be okay.
